What is Minnesota learning about caring for Latino elders? What are the urgent needs of Minnesota's older Latino population? What does culturally sensitive end-of-life care look like for Minnesota's Latino elders and families?

Minnesota is creating a new elder care landscape—where care for Latinos is changing in unique and creative ways. This session will draw on the recent experiences of CLUES and Hospice Minnesota, two statewide organizations that have formed a new partnership in caring for Latino elders. We are pleased to host this gathering of community members and health and human service professionals at CLUES' new elders center—The Dakotah in South Saint Paul.

Jesse Bethke Gomez, President of CLUES and Barbara Greene, Multicultural Consultant for Hospice Minnesota, will share their experiences and lessons in serving Latino elders facing culturally specific aging and end-of-life care challenges.

Minnesota is taking a lead in developing culturally sensitive end-of-life care for our Latino population.
